THE GREAT CHURCH OF NOTRE DAME AND THE MAISONNEUVE MONUMENT, MONTREAL—The above illustration is remarkable from the fact that the photograph from which it was made was taken when the facade was covered with ice. This frozen mantle so completely enveloped the exterior walls as to entirely efface the seams between the stones. In the foreground of the picture will be noticed Dom Antoine, mitred Abbot of the Trappist Monks at Oka. (Photo by Gordon, St. Catherine street West, Montreal.)

WESTERN CANADA'S LEADING RAILWAY CENTRE—The tracks and yards of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg—the Chicago of the Canadian West. These are among the largest in the world, covering a ground area of several acres. Big extensions continue to be made to them annually, however, in order to accommodate the rapidly increasing traffic of the Western Provinces of Canada. (Photo by F. H. Randal, Winnipeg.)

ARCHBISHOP LANGEVIN'S NEW CATHEDRAL—This edifice is now in course of erection at St. Boniface, Manitoba, and will be completed in 1909. would doubtless now have possessed a title, as do his confreres, Lord Harmsworth of the Daily Mail, and Sir George Newnes, of the Westminster Gazette. C. A. P.'s time, however, is to come, and he is waiting for it.

LORD NORTHCLIFFE.

Lord Northcliffe, who is, perhaps, better known as Sir Alfred Harmsworth, is now forty-three. He began as an office boy in the publishing office of Tit-Bits, when only fifteen, having left home because of a trifling disagreement with his father, a barrister, who wished Arthur to follow in that profession. It wasn't long before the office boy was writing for Tit-Bits, which he soon left to become one of the editors of the Illustrated London News. He was married at twenty-one, and, less than a year afterward, started Answers. In two or three years it had half a million circulation. To-day he owns more newspapers and periodicals than any other man in the world—30 at least, and possibly more, and is very rich, as well as titled.

ferred in a competition a prize of a berth on that paper worth about ten dollars a week. This prize, which was, of course, open to all the country, was brilliantly carried off by young Pearson, and was a splendid testimony of the winner's merits. For some years

PEARSON AND THE "TIMES."

THE news that the London Times—or the Thunderer, as Edward Sterling's denunciatory "leaders" caused it to be dubbed in the early years of the 19th century—has changed hands, while coming as somewhat of a shock to the Conservative instinct of the English race, is really not the surprise it would have been in days prior to the Pearson-Harmsworth vogue. Those who have watched the trend of English journalism in recent years are convinced that, sooner or later, England's greatest journal was doomed to pass into the hands of the "moderns," and, when the Standard, that old lady of Shoe Lane, deep-rooted in the soil as it was thought to be, actually passed into the control of Cyril Arthur Pearson, then those "in the know" were assured that the days of the Times, in its own line, at all events, had practically ceased to be. The man who has now acquired sway in Printing House Square was quite

THE ONLY PEER-PUBLISHER OF ENGLAND—Lord Northcliffe starting out on an automobile tour through Great Britain. This popular journalist, who is better known as Sir Alfred Harmsworth, is proprietor of almost forty periodicals of one kind or another in the United Kingdom, including the London Daily Mail, London Daily Mirror, London Evening News, Answers and the Harmsworth Magazine, with an aggregate circulation exceeding that of any newspaper combination in the world. In the illustration he is dressed in white, and occupies a seat in the leading automobile.

afterwards Pearson was hidden in Tit-Bits office. Suddenly readers of periodical "literature" were invited to buy Pearson's Weekly, and Fleet street knew that, over a question of salary, Pearson had broken with Newnes. Financially backed by Sir William Ingram, of the Illustrated London News, Pearson had set up for himself, and from that time never went back. His next venture was still on the lines of opposing Newnes, and his Pearson's Magazine is, perhaps, the best monthly turned out from an English press. Several other weeklies followed, then came a daily, The Express. Next, this suddenly risen journalistic-cum-financial genius acquired control, at an enormous expenditure, of the Standard (morning), the Evening Standard, and

THE UNRAVELLING OF THE DRUCE MYSTERY—Workmen putting up a board fence around the Druce vault in Highgate Cemetery, London, preparatory to opening the grave of the late Mr. T. C. Druce. It was alleged that the casket, however, revealed the presence therein of a body, which was at once identified as that of Mr. Druce. As a result of this examination, the perjury case against the deceased's son, Mr. Herbert Druce, was withdrawn.

CURLING THROUGH BRITISH EYES.

THE London Caledonian Curling Club, remarks the Daily Telegraph, London, Eng., under the leadership of Sir John Heron Maxwell, was again to be the fore in the opening of the season, and at Princes' Skating Club its Thursday evening fore-gatherings will continue until the

The new season will certainly prove a record one in the history of the pastime. By the opening of the new Glaciarium in Glasgow the annual England v. Scotland bonspiel can annually take place, however open the winter may be. Again, owing to the uncertainty of ice here, the Canadians have never felt justified in crossing the Atlantic to try conclusions with their brothers of the broom. There is now, however, the opportunity afforded of looking fact that 1907 was the centennial of the establishment of the pastime in Canada. It was in 1807 that the Montreal Curling Club, the Dominion's first curling club, was founded. And now the game is fast becoming throughout British North America the great sport of youth and maturity alike. Certainly in the Dominion the day when it was considered an old man's game has gone for ever.

Curling has ever been fortunate in the distinguished patronage it has received. It was one of the only recreations engaged in by Queen Victoria, who was initiated into its mysteries by the then Earl of Mansfield, president of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, during a visit to Scone Palace in 1842.

International Sport.

In relation to the centenary of the Montreal Curling Club, it is of special interest to note that its honorary president, Lord Strathcona, and Mount Royal, has taken his place at the head of Canadian curling. And when the Dominion bowling team, nearly all of whom were curlers also, visited the Motherland in 1904, Lord Strathcona displayed a kindly practical interest over their itinerary. In all probability the visit will be repaid next season. Owing Knightsbridge ice being secured, to combine curling with the sister pastime, in the event of the coming year of representatives from both the frozen and green rinks of the Dominion. It would be a matter of intense interest to see how the Canadians would acquit themselves upon the artificial ice in this country. The Scottish team found the rinks in the Dominion decidedly too sharp. Although curling takes place in enclosed areas, the ice is as hard, smooth, and keen as plate-glass. In order to give a slight roughness or frosting to the ice, "kebbling" is resorted to. This is effected by an attendant with a steaming pail in one hand and the fine nozzle of a sprinkling can in the other, walking backwards from ice to ice, flinging to left and right rainbow arches of boiling water, sprayed into the finest globules that freeze as they fall. Curious to note that in Quebec iron "stones" are used, but in the rest of Canada granite alone obtains—the stones being imported from Scotland. In early days, before such could be obtained, the Scottish settlers curled with wooden blocks, turned out of hard oak soaked for weeks or months in water, and frozen hard.

Curling has received a decided fillip of late by the advancement of the pastime in Switzerland.

MR. A. G. CUNNINGHAM.

Mr. Cunningham is an old Montreal boy who got his first stage experience with the Amateur Operatic Society in this city, and who subsequently studied Oratorio and Opera in London, England. ## THE LATE MADAME BRUCHESE

THE recent death of Madame Bruchesi, mother of Mgr. Bruchesi, Archbishop of Montreal, evoked from Roman Catholics and Protestants many sympathetic expressions of condolence with His Grace in his sad affliction. To these messages His Grace has replied in the following terms:—

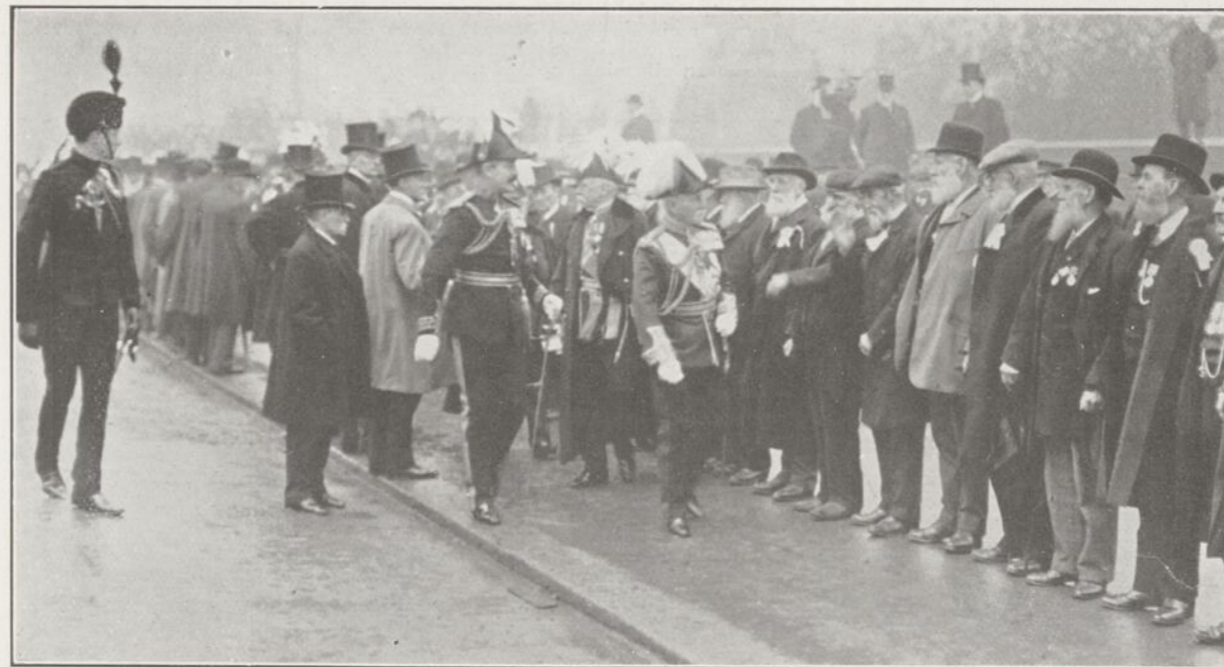

"Our very dear Brethren,—On the 29th of December last, we experienced the deep grief in the loss of our good mother. She passed quietly away in her eighty-first year after a few weeks' illness, supported by all the comforts of our holy religion, and honored by the Sovereign Pontiff's apostolic blessing. We would have never spoken publicly of so personal an affliction, if you had not in a certain sense, imposed the obligation upon us, by your generous manifestation of sympathy...."

"The immense concourse of priests and people beside the bier, the funeral services promised by religious communities, by colleges, and a good number of our parishes, the thousands of masses offered for the soul which is so dear to us, the fervent prayers from friends, from children, and from the poor, have touched us beyond all expression. Joined to the expressions of precious sympathy which came to us from His Eminence, the Cardinal Secretary of State, from His Excellency the Apostolic Delegate, from our venerable colleagues of the episcopacy, from our devoted clergy, from many families, from the highest civil authority, from the press, and from our separated brethren themselves, have all imposed upon us a debt of gratitude which we feel incapable of paying. We take here, however, the solemn engagement, that in the future, not a single day will pass without our recommending to the infinite goodness of God at the holy altar, all the spiritual benefactors of our regretted mother and all our pious sympathizers."

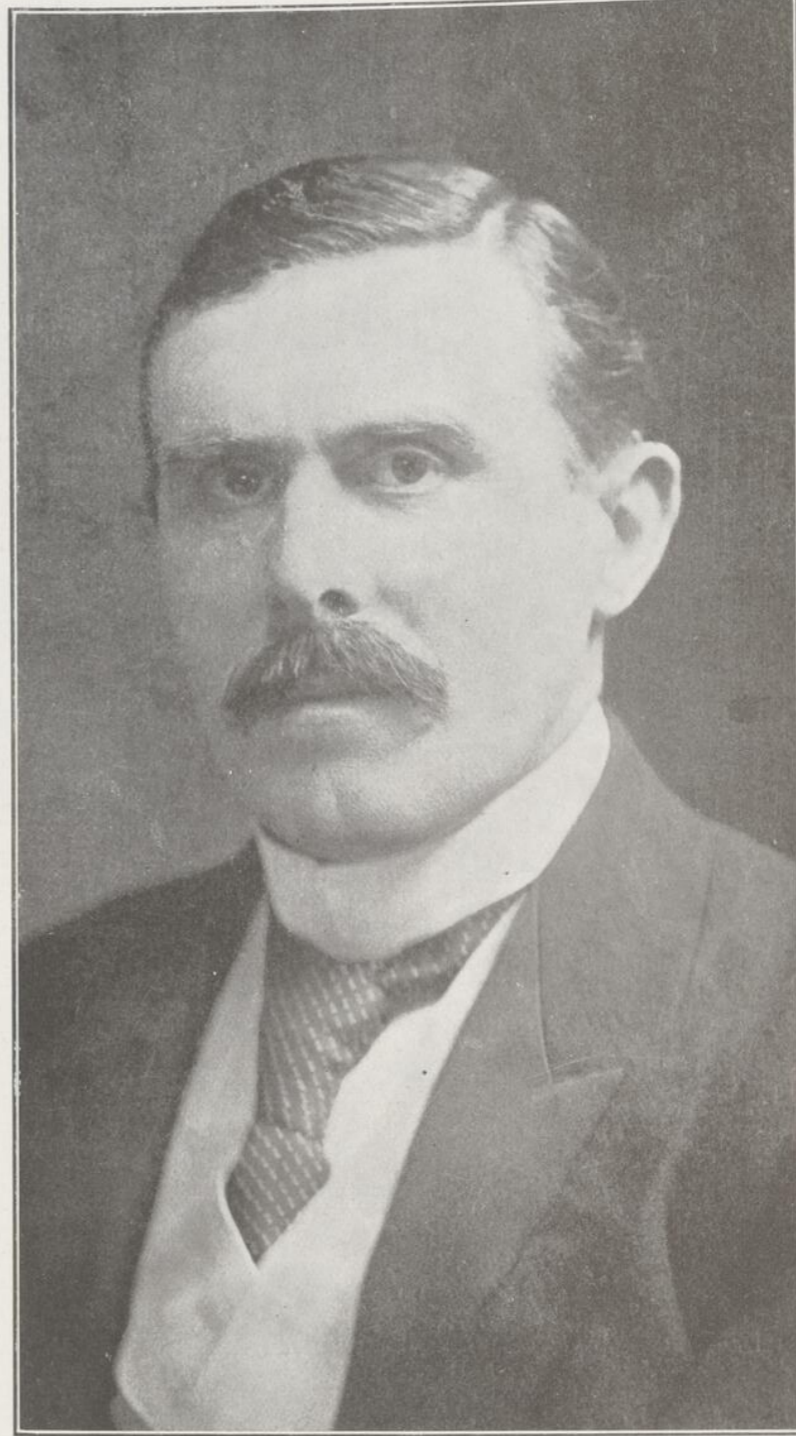

"Borne down by a grief similar to that which has reached us, Monseigneur Pie, the illustrious bishop of Poitiers, said: 'A son considers him-
